A Brief History

Quinton Cemetery was opened in January 1923 as the 2 churchyards from Quinton Parish Church had reached full capacity. The history of the cemetery dates back to 1911 when the City Council initially approved the purchase of 45 acres of land between Halesowen Road and Narrow Lane (forming part of Hagge Farm) for the purpose of a cemetery. Since that date, several acquisitions of land have been made and other areas transferred, sold or exchanged resulting in the present total area of 51 acres.

A new chapel, office and registrars house, were erected in 1936, of which only the office and house now remain.

Grave Sections

Full graves, children's graves and cremated remains graves are available. Sections are designated as Free Church, Roman Catholic, Consecrated and there is also a section for use by the Chinese Community. Burials can take place in either private or public graves.

Bricked grave spaces are also available at Quinton, located in the older, traditional areas.

Quinton is the only City Cemetery lying outside the City boundary.

Garden of Remembrance

Quinton Cemetery has had a Garden of Remembrance since 1994. This is used for the scattering of cremated remains.

Grave Memorials

Quinton has sections which permit Lawn A and Lawn B type memorials. Lawn A memorials are without bases, Lawn B memorials have bases. The remainder of the grave is turfed over, although up to 18" (46cm) from the memorial may be cultivated. No fences, kerbing or chippings are permitted.

Small pockets of land for traditional memorials are available. Full memorials running the length of the grave are permissible. No fencing is allowed.
